Synergex Divests Technology Workgroup to Focus on Core Logistics and Distribution Business

Mississauga, Ontario, June 6, 2008 - Synergex Corporation (TSX: SYX) today announced the sale of its Technology workgroup.

The divestiture will allow Synergex to focus on its core integrated logistics and distribution services businesses, including its expansion into Latin America.

Terms of the purchase will require the payment of the existing intercompany, balances in full by issuance of a note payable for approximately $3.9 million. David Aiello the majority shareholder of Synergex, will acquire the share ownership of this former workgroup through a private company controlled by him. Synergex will benefit and participate from any future liquidity event or sale of this business but shall have no responsibility to fund future operations subsequent to the closing of the transaction. Synergex will also benefit from an increase in retained earnings of approximately $1.3 million as a result of the sale.

“This sale is another step in our plan to re-align our business and concentrate on delivering a value-added suite of supply chain management solutions for manufacturers and retailers, primarily in the computer entertainment and video games sectors,” said David Aiello, President and CEO of Synergex Corporation. “We will now focus on expanding our customer network, profitably diversifying our product line, and building new markets through our geographic expansion into Latin America.”

The sale follows the Company’s announcement last year of its intention to focus on the Company’s core business and analyze the strategic options available. The Technology workgroup represented less than 1.9% of total Company revenues of $203.6 million, in 2007, and has consistently generated net losses including a net income loss of $1.58 million for the year ending December 31, 2007 and has continued to generate losses during 2008. The sale eliminates ongoing losses in future financial results.
